First Healing Little Hearts 5K a Success

By Shawn Badgley

Monday morning was brisk in more ways than one, as upward of 300 runners participated in the inaugural Healing Little Hearts 5K in Mattapoisett. And it was fitting that the two big winners are both younger than 14.

The organization, founded by the Weglowski family as son and brother Brady, 8 years old, battles a congenital heart defect, helps raise funds for medical research. The Columbus Day event raised thousands of dollars for the cause, as competitors included athletes and exercise buffs from toddlers to teenagers to senior citizens.

"It's an awesome event," said organizer Kathleen LeClair, a close friend of the Weglowski family. "The weather is great. Mattapoisett has just been wonderful.

Above: Upward of 300 runners competed in the inaugural Healing Little Hearts 5K on a beautiful Columbus Day morning. The organization helps fund research efforts into children's heart defects. "From my family and from the families you're helping, thank you," said Kelly Weglowski, who, along with husband, Marc, and daughter Jillian founded Healing Little Hearts in the midst of their son and brother Brady's own battle. Sylvia, a student-athlete in cross country at Old Rochester Regional Junior High School, ran the course – which began and ended at Center School – in 20:48. Meg Hughes, 11, won the Women's Division with a time of 21:40. Photo by Shawn Badgley.

Facebook Fun Friday

Each week we give you a chance to win great stuff on our Facebook page. Check us out at www.facebook.com/wanderer and keep an eye out for the Friday post each week.

Diane St Pierre Hartley

who won last week's Facebook Fun Friday!

This week we'll have a gift card to Dunkin' Donuts to Give Away!

We're really happy with the turnout. A huge thank you to sponsors, volunteers, the community, police, and the school."

Adam Sylvia of Rochester, 13, emerged as the overall winner of the race, dispatching of the course in 20:48. The student-athlete in cross country at Old Rochester Regional Junior High School will next run in a 10K. He can only hope the conditions will be as friendly."

"It was perfect," he said. "I never came close to getting tired."

Meanwhile, 11-year-old Meg Hughes, also of Rochester, continued to build upon her elite status as a runner, finishing first in the Female Division with a time of 21:40.

"It wasn't my best race," Hughes said. "But it was good."

As the runners lined up for the course, which began and ended at Center School, Kelly Weglowski delivered an inspiring speech invoking the courage of her son.

"From my family and the families you're helping, thank you," she said.

has been around for more than 15 months and held a first annual meeting to bring residents up to date on their activities.

Over 50 residents attended the meeting, which opened with president Sue Wood welcoming the crowd and introducing Treasurer Priscilla Ditchfield and Vice President Jerry Garcia. Wood noted that the primary goal of the group is to fundraise and support the COA because as a town tax supported organization, the COA cannot fundraise.

Wood discussed the five committees, including long-range planning, communication, membership, fundraising, and enrichment. Anyone interested in serving on any of these committees should contact FMCOA at P.O. Box 937, Marion, MA 02738 or stop by the Town House and speak with COA director Susan Schwager.

Under long-range planning, Wood said that the committee is researching the idea of a community or senior center in town.

"The committee is in the very, very early research phase," Wood said. Residents spoke up and agreed that the town needs a place for older adults to gather and socialize. Added Wood: "One of our goals for 2014 is to get the ball rolling and focus on a campaign for a senior or community center."

A presentation by Fairhaven COA Director Ann Silvia followed the committee reports. Silvia spoke about the Fairhaven Senior Center and how it is used by residents for meals, social day activities, bingo, bridge, yoga, exercise classes, and much more. "It's a very important part of their lives," Silvia said.

Outreach worker Ora Mae Torres spoke about the COA and said the number of older adults age 60 and up increased in 2012 from 1,513 to 1,635. "We expect to continue to see increases in the number and types of services provided by the COA so that Marion older adults will be able to continue to age in place and remain in their homes," Torres said.

The COA vans provided upward of 5,996 rides in 2012, which is an increase of 733 rides, or 14 percent increase over the 2011 figures. In addition to van rides, the council van drivers delivered more than 5,340 meals in 2012.

For more information on the FMCOA, visit their website at friendsmarioncoa@gmail.com. Membership flyers can be picked up at the town library and at the COA office at the Town House.

Taber Library Program Helps Homebound By Shawn Badgley

Elizabeth Taber Library Director Libby O'Neill was reminded of her childhood while thinking of ways to help Marion residents take greater advantage of the library's services.

"I used to volunteer for Meals on Wheels with my dad when I was young," said O'Neill during a discussion about Taber's new Homebound Books program. "That's where the thought to partner with their organization came from."

The library has joined also with the Marion Council on Aging to deliver books to residents unable to visit the library.

"The idea is to enable those with short-term or long-term illness, disabilities and physical difficulties, to call the library, have a short conversation with me about they like – it could be large-print or audio or mystery or romance, or whatever genre people like to read – and bring them books, as long as their library card is in good standing," said O'Neill, who worked in community outreach at the Boston Public Library earlier in her career. "They can make specific requests, but that may take a little longer. In most cases, the program will focus on areas of interest."

While most books are due back in two weeks, the Homebound Books program will allow for a month-long checkout.

A Cranberry Bog Runs Through It

This Mattapoisett Life

By Marilou Newell

On a picture-perfect October Saturday morning, Sara DaSilva Quintal, Restoration Ecologist with the Buzzards Bay Coalition, stood before a group of approximately 50 people who had come out to harvest cranberries. The coalition had put out an invitation to come to the now protected retired bogs formally owned by Decas Cranberry Company and harvest berries.

"These bogs were a high target for preservation due to their proximity to the watershed region," DaSilva Quintal said. She said that the USDA had worked in partnership with the owner and the Coalition to secure the 60-acre parcel in the continuing effort to protect the aquifer. Noting the diversity of wildlife and plant life in the immediate area, she told the group that the beauty of the open spaces are now shared with the public for recreational activities. Beyond harvesting in the fall, there are walking and cycling trails, picnicking, bird watching and wild life observation, wildflowers, and the silence of nature to enjoy.

Many of us look forward to this time of the year and revel in all things associated with the harvest season. Canning and jarring the local bounty isn't lost on us, the hearty New Englanders. Applesauce, pickles, green beans, peaches, blueberries, grapes, tomatoes, and so much more become captives in bottles and jars we cherish when the snow drifts pile against the front door. One fruit above all others has a deeper historical significance to this area: the mighty cranberry.

The Cape Cod Cranberry Growers Association website (www.cranberries.org) states: "The cranberry, along with the blueberry and Concord grape, is one of North America's three native fruits that are commercially grown. Cranberries were first used by Native Americans, who discovered the wild berry's versatility as a food, fabric dye, and healing agent.

"The name 'cranberry' derives from the Pilgrim name for the fruit, 'craneberry,' so called because the small, pink blossoms that appear in the spring resemble the head and bill of a Sandhill crane. European settlers adopted the Native American uses for the fruit and found the berry a valuable bartering tool.

"American whalers and mariners carried cranberries on their voyages to prevent scurvy. In 1816, Captain Henry Hall became the first to successfully cultivate cranberries. By 1871, the first association of cranberry growers in the United States had formed."

I find the cranberry. My maternal grandmother and great grandmother "screened" cranberries. My maternal grandfather would jump in a bog and pick berries on days when shore fishing wasn't an option. The cranberry industry you could say is in my blood. Yet for my son the juice runs even deeper.

My son's paternal family from grandfather to father, from uncle and aunt to cousins, all worked long hours seven days a week when the cranberry harvest was in full swing. In those days, most bogs were "dry" picked. It was exhausting, labor-intensive work. Dry picking required crews of people operating small machines that were similar to small rotor-tillers. In staggered lines, the crew members walked behind the picking machines making sure that all of the berries were removed from the vines. Once the box was full, the worker quickly removed it, replacing it with an empty one without stopping the forward motion, hour after hour, day after day, until the harvest was in. Fresh fruit cranberries would then be taken to a "screen" house where the berries would pass along on conveyer belts and the "screeners" would deftly remove the less than perfect specimens, leaves, and vines. These berries were then processed into either juice or sauce.

Also from The Cape Cod Cranberry Growers website, we find the details for the dry picking process: "This traditional method of harvesting now represents about 10% of the Massachusetts cranberry harvest. Even though fresh fruit represents a small fraction of the total harvested crop, it nevertheless is an important aspect of the cranberry industry and for many growers, a way of life. In order to pick the fresh fruit, the vines must be completely dry. Even a slight shower the night before, heavy dew, or damp conditions from a frost is enough to delay harvest until the conditions improve on the bog.

"The marketing of cranberry products hadn't reached the zenith as it is today with blended juices, flavored dried berries, berries in cereal, berries in cake and bread mixes, cookies, covering supermarket shelves. Nor had the marketing machine reached beyond the continental U.S. The cranberry industry has done a remarkable job promoting the health benefits of the mighty cranberry not only domestically but globally as well. In 2011 33% of the total U.S. production was exported. European and Asian markets have fallen in love with the mighty cranberry.

"Today most bogs are wet picked. The bogs are flooded and machines beat the vines causing the berries to float to the top where they are rounded up and conveyed into waiting trucks. Wet picking doesn't require anywhere near the amount of human power that dry picking does. And as the demand for processed cranberry products has increased the demand for dry picked berries has declined. Dry picked berries are the fresh fruit you'll find in the market seasonally for cranberry bread, homemade sauce, craft projects or, your own fancy holiday fare."

employment. It was a time when economic conditions were difficult. White-collar positions in this area were few and far between. I cast about willing to take any type of work to bring in a few dollars. An acquaintance of mine was a crew foreman for Decas Cranberries. He offered me a job picking. I didn't hesitate, even though I didn't have a clue what I had signed on for or how it would change my opinion of agricultural work.

Manual labor requires one to put the ego on the shelf and put the body in motion, the brain on hold. Yet there was a type of soul-satisfying meditation when you spend the entire day walking behind a machine that combs cranberries off the vine. You pace yourself and separate your thinking from your body's repetitive motions, your thoughts can wander and you have time to solve your problems. At least that was my experience. That experience of being out in the open, sitting on an overturned cranberry box waiting for the bog to dry sufficiently for picking made me appreciate fully the men and women who work the fields. I felt closer to my ancestors and felt compassion for the struggles they went through to provide for their children. I felt more connected from having been a bog worker.

Today, about 20% of the total U.S. cranberry harvest comes for the greater Buzzards Bay area. Other regions where cranberries are cultivated commercially are New Jersey, Wisconsin, and the Pacific Northwest. Such large-scale production is not without its impact on the environment.

Commercially cultivated cranberries require vast amounts of fresh water. Fertilizers are used, which causes nitrogen to leach into the ground water. In Mattapoissett, the retiring of bogs near the watershed is of paramount importance.

On this day, many were enjoying that very activity. Mark Kearins of Norfolk has a summer home here and was out for a morning to get fresh air and to learn more about the work of the Coalition. Carol Adler and her friend Pam talked about how much fun they had as children ice skating on frozen bogs and the glory of the morning at hand. Erin Riordan of Marion gathered her fair share with a huge grin on her face. Andrea Buckley and her sister-in-law Karin Kingsland rode their bikes from home and were looking forward to making Thanksgiving goodies with their red bounty. May Wooding and Aimee Mack of Bristol, R.I., had heard about the outing from the Coalition's mailing, they couldn't wait to get into the bogs.

Colleen Hamilton and Grace Mullen-Thompson are Commonwealth Corps interns working presently with the coalition. They guided groups further into the bogs seeking good patches from which the rubies could be collected.

DaSilva Quintal said that eventually the bogs would return to woodlands. As I looked out over the acreage, I wondered if one day someone would be giving a talk on

Animal Advice

Jay Gould, DVM

Attack Cat

My one year old cat stalks me as I walk around the house and frequently attacks my ankles. He doesn't try to hurt me but how can I get him to stop this behavior?

If your cat is an exclusively indoor pet, he may be exhibiting normal hunting behavior. Cats are natural predators and your cat is simply acting instinctively. Make a toy out of a ball of aluminum foil on a string tied to a stick. Try to get the cat to focus on hunting something other than your ankles.

I have dragged a string on the floor that he will stalk but it doesn't seem to lessen the ankle attacks. Any other suggestions?

First, I'd avoid letting your cat play with a simple piece of string. If he plays with string when you are not present and swallows some, it may require intestinal surgery to remove it.

If your cat requires more play time than you can provide, consider adopting a kitten. There is no guarantee that they will get along, but since your cat is still young he will probably gladly accept a new playmate. Cause for Paws in Mattapoisett, A Helping Paw in Buzzards Bay, South Coast Humane Society in Dartmouth and Petfinder.com have many kitten available for adoption at this time of year.

Mattapoisett Land Trust Autumn Walk

By Marilou Newell

"In the wilderness is the preservation of the world."

The marker at the beginning of the Hiller Trail quotes a passage from Thoreau, probably one of Mother Nature's most well-known protectors. On this October Saturday afternoon, many more kindred spirits gathered together for a guided walk through Mattapoisett Land Trust properties adjacent to Route 6.

About 50 adults, two youngsters, and five leashed four-footed pals trekked across Route 6 from the Quaker Meetinghouse parking lot to enter Land Trust holdings.

The two-hour tour featured the blueberry patch that was saved from a fatal stronghold by encroaching woodlands and rehabilitated by volunteers and the local Boy Scout troop. Gary Johnson, president of the Land Trust, said that in three to five years, the public will benefit from the work taking place now on the blueberry bushes, which had not seen the light of day from many years prior to the land trust acquiring the property.

Taking the Hiller trail deep into the nearly 300 acres currently held by the Trust, the group picked their way along well-cut trails dotted with moss-covered rocks and dry wildflowers. Stopping at the former Able Grace property, which is now part of the Trust holdings, a vernal pond was visited. The pond is aptly named Grace Pond. Johnson explained what a vernal pond was and the type of wildlife that thrives therein.

Paul Osenkowski, active and passionate member of the Land Trust team, said that the trails are intended to be viable for walkers and hikers but discouraging to motorized vehicles such as ATVs.

The tour stopped at a wooden bridge that was built by Eagle Scout Bryan Buckley, who achieved Eagle status in part due to this building project.

Luana Josvold, clerk for the Land Trust said, "We are surprised at how many people came out today!" She went on to say that having the opportunity to show people the Land Trust property reinforces that these places are open to the public and have been preserved for the public to enjoy. Josvold also noted that protecting lands in the watershed area is another goal of the Trust.

The Trust is looking at other parcels that might be added to the current holdings in this area to expand the trails and natural spaces for public enjoyment.

Marion Braces for EMS Vote

By Shawn Badgley

With under two weeks to go until Fall Town Meeting, Marion officials are hoping voters will approve upward of $349,000 to improve EMS service.

Special Article 4 reads as follows: "To see if the Town will vote to raise and appropriate or transfer from available funds in the Treasury the sum no to exceed $349,108 to supplement the Fiscal Year 2014 Fire Department budget for the purpose of augmenting ambulance staffing and related expenses; or take any other action thereon."

Town Administrator Paul Dawson had announced at a recent Board of Selectmen meeting that Marion had launched the bidding process for private ambulance service – which would be less expensive, but potentially less invested in the community – in case voters rejected the appropriation. As the bids start to come in, Dawson said he understands that many residents are opposed to the idea.

"I understand how people feel about the private ambulance service," said Dawson, noting that there are others who are either ambivalent or in favor of privatization. "It's not my first choice."

During an interview last week, Dawson reaffirmed that the bidding process in place is "to be prepared," and said that he had told prospective bidders that he "was even hoping that we wouldn't have to use them."

But Dawson also said that the town can't have it both ways.

"We have a very real problem with our response times, significant deficiencies that the state's Office of Emergency Services has told us that we have to improve upon if we're to hold on to our license," he said. "Things are unacceptable as they stand. We have to have a staffing plan that's mindful of the town's needs. If you don't want to create new benefitted positions, that's fine, but there are limited alternatives.

"I have a responsibility to make certain that when someone picks up the phone to call 911, somebody is there," Dawson said. "I've got to have someone ready to go. I've got to have a plan in place."

Dawson said that is a "perfect storm" of conditions that has left Marion and other towns in this position.

"It's a different era. You used to have nearly all of your emergency employees living in the town they served, on call at a moment's notice and familiar with the terrain," Dawson said. "Fast forward 35 years, and that's not the case anymore. It's not news to anyone, but it's a national trend: These men and women are coming from greater distances when something happens. That has an impact. That's certainly not the only factor in this, but it's a big one."

With concerns from some community leaders about the direction of Marion's budget – from reimbursement policies to grandfathered benefits to the funding of a new position of Facilities Manager (itself approved at Town Meeting in May) – Dawson said he is aware that the EMS funding to strengthen ambulance service could be on shaky ground.

"I learned a long time ago to never try and influence or predict these things," he said. "My job, along with the Board of Selectmen and others at the Town House, is to present all of the information I can. It's the voters' job to decide. And we'll accept it. We'll respect it either way. But good, bad, or indifferent, it's a huge change in how we would operate."

40B Bike Path Tops Agenda

Marion Board of Selectmen

By Joan Hartnett-Barry

A strip of land adjacent to the recently approved 40B project along Route 105 in Marion was a major topic of discussion at the Marion Board of Selectmen meeting on Tuesday evening. Ken Steen, a representative for the Baywatch Realty Trust, came before the board and wanted a final vote on the proposed land swap for the bike path area.

It didn't happen.

All three board members posed questions and wanted more time to discuss the issue, which included the options of: turning the proposed land over to the town of Marion or to the Sippican Lands Trust. Both options posed issues regarding long-term maintenance of the property. Eleven years ago, the bike path was one of the primary issues in discussions in allowing the project to happen. Selectman John Henry noted that during the meeting, saying "this is a major component of the greenway, bike path, linking our Southcoast, we need to secure this link."

"This is a new issue and we need time to digest it," Selectman Steven Cushing said. "There are various fiscal and maintenance issues to explore," Henry agreed.

Next up was a discussion with Pamela Marean, Development Specialist for the town of Marion, regarding a GIS (Geographical Informational System) grant that would improve land use abilities in any area of the Tri-Town. "This is a great opportunity," Henry said. But, other questions, such as fees for those doing the legwork, emerged. The Selectmen held off on a vote until more questions could be answered.

Next up was a request from Nicholas Carnazza for approval for an aqua cultural application. The board asked the applicant for more specific information regarding the dimensions of the area.

Jennifer Francis, a member of the Marion Energy Management Committee, spoke and said that the Marion Planning Board and the Marion Energy Management Committee would go before Fall Town Meeting with the compromise that the two committees had agreed to. She said that she hoped the town would approve with the new Solar Bylaw.

The Selectmen agreed to approve the Halloween Parade, sponsored by the Marion Art Center, to be held at 4:00 pm. Also, a November 2 fundraiser for the Friends of the Marion VFW was approved.

Next up was a discussion of warrant items for the October 28 Fall Town Meeting. The members of the board split the agenda and will report back on the proposed issues prior to the Town Meeting.

Lastly, Henry noted the passing of Lucia Davis,

Officials Discuss Multiple Projects

Rochester Conservation Commission

By Nick Walecka

The Rochester Conservation Commission is doing its part to make sure some of the town's free space is easily accessible, with several projects either under way or scheduled in the near future.

At their meeting Tuesday evening, they discussed projects at Leonard's Pond and Doggett Brook, with tree clearing already done at the former to the old parking lot area that had since grown over. At Doggett Brook, trail clearing has already taken place, and there are plans in the near future to construct a fence near an abutting neighbor's property.

As for Leonard's Pond, Conservation Agent Laurell Farinon said that Highway Surveyor Jeff Eldridge had cleared some small trees and put in reprocessed asphalt down on the lot. Farinon also said that since the work was done, she has seen cars parked in the lot, a sign that people are utilizing the land there.

"There are people out there every time that I've gone by," she said.

The Commission also approved a filing from the Rochester Land Trust for their property at Leonard's Pond, which will allow them to do preventative pruning along the trail there. They also hope to get a kiosk

At Doggett Brook, the Commission discussed a proposed 220-foot fence for the demarcation of the property line upon the abutter's parcel.

"It's not a barrier," Chairperson Rosemary Smith said. "We're not trying to keep people out with this. It's not going to be blocking any existing trail."

The Commission decided that two cables along five posts dug into the ground would be suitable, and will look into the optimal material for the cables as far as durability and price. They also thanked Eldridge for his work on the project.

"The Rochester Conservation Commission is very grateful work Jeff Eldridge did on the property," Farinon said.

The Commission also announced an open forum for a potential Community Preservation Association on November 13 at the Rochester Council on Aging in the early evening.

In other news, the Committee discussed potential mandatory Advanced Placement (AP) testing and other potential changes for students taking AP courses at Old Rochester Regional High School. Currently, there is not mandatory testing and has not been for seven years, according to principal Michael Devoll, but officials are looking into potentially reverting to mandatory testing.

"We're concerned at the school level," said Devoll regarding exploring different options for their AP program. "We want to do a better job at [running the program]."

Devoll discussed several aspects of the program, noting that ORR had 37 students sign up for AP History for this semester, but said that only 12 followed through. He hinted at possibly implementing contracts signed by the students and their parents as one potential change.

He also said that currently, AP tests are $85 apiece, which could burden some students and potentially influence their decision to take the courses if testing was made mandatory.

"There's a number of directions that it can go in," said Duvall, adding that they would continue talks regarding the AP program.

The Committee also announced the nomination of Nancy Clark to fill a temporary position on the Committee.

"It would be advantageous of us to reach out and accept this opportunity," said Superintendent Douglas White of Clark, who will fill one of the Mattapoisett seats on the Committee. According to White, Clark will fill the seat for the remainder of the year until it opens back up before next school year, when it will go out to vote.

had their second annual field trip to Camp Greenough in Yarmouth last week. The students participated in a number of ropes course challenges and team-building games in order to get to know one another while building trust and communication skills.

"I had a great day with fellow Student Council members," said Callie Gomes, senior class vice president and member of Student Council. "I think these activities brought us closer together and taught us more about teamwork and leadership."

Activities included trust falls from raised platforms, humorous and intellectually challenging group games, a zip line through the forest, and high ropes courses. The zip line and high ropes courses, about 30 feet in the air, required participants to wear proper safety gear such as harnesses and helmets.

Once properly secured and belayed, the daring student could walk across a wooden beam or tightrope wire high in the air, with little or nothing to hang onto. Partner ropes courses included a giant ladder with wooden beams at increasingly higher distances from one another.

Jeremy Bare, a senior senator on Student Council, was one of the many students who tackled the high ropes courses.

"It was definitely a new experience and everybody seemed to overcome some sort of fear or obstacle," he said. "I know I did."

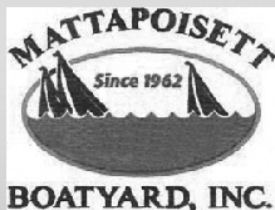

Although his height gave him an advantage on some courses, Bare said the obstacles gave him and his peers the opportunity to work on "trusting each other and working together as a group to reach a common goal. We worked a lot with cooperation, trust, [and] leadership." Student Council members from all grades agreed this field trip was a great way to start off the year. Freshman class president Brooke Santos said, "It was really fun because we got to get to know all the other people on student council. It helped me get to know the upperclassmen. It was great team building."

With presidents, vice presidents, and senator representatives from each class, Student Council is quite a large team to come together. Still, they are a friendly and spirited group with high expectations for the rest of the school year.

Under the leadership of their executive board – President Kelly Merlo, Vice President Lizzie MacLellan, Public Relations Officer Leah Thomas, and Administrator Ruhi Raje – ORR's Student Council is in the midst of planning this year's homecoming spirit week and dance.

Fall Teams Face Pivotal Part of Season

ORR Sports Update

By Michael Kassabian

The middle of October tends to be a stressful time, especially for student-athletes. Between schoolwork, homecoming festivities, and – for seniors – college applications, student-athletes are also under the pressure of trying to advance to the state tournament. The week ahead will give many teams the opportunity to advance to the postseason. Here is a look at the sixth week of results for ORR athletics.

Boys and Girls Cross Country: As the postseason for cross country is a divisional race, the Bulldogs do not need to worry about qualifying. This week, the boys and girls took place in a tri-meet against Seekonk and Apponequet. The girls won both meets, keeping their undefeated season going. Sammie Barrett was the top finisher in both races, running a 21:37 5K. The girls placed five runners in the top 6, with other impressive performances by sophomore Emily Josephson (21:44) and Paige Santos (22:09). The boys won their meet against Apponequet, taking the top 4 spots, but unfortunately lost to powerhouse Seekonk. Though Mike Wyman set a new course record at Apponequet with a time of 16:09, Seekonk took spots 2,3, and 5-10 to hand the boys their first loss of the season.

Volleyball: The girls' volleyball team will not be able to qualify for the state tournament, as there are not enough games left in their season to attain a .500 average. The girls came the closest they have all year to winning a game, winning 2 sets against Wareham High School. Unfortunately, the girls were not able to win the third set, and lost the hard-fought game 3-2. With another loss against Fairhaven (3-0) later in the week, the girls have yet to win a game.

Football: Coming off of a bye week, the boys had a long rest before their toughest competitors of the season: Dighton-Rehoboth High School. The Bulldogs were able to pull out a 35-28 victory over the SCC rival Falcons thanks largely to quarterback Nolan Bergeron, who scored three touchdowns. Richie Phillips added a touchdown of his own, along with 245 rushing yards. Sophomore running back Darien Dumond provided the key play for the Bulldogs when he scored on a 5-yard rush to break a 28-28 tie. The Bulldogs' running game continues to be their strong suit, and this win proves that the boys have the capabilities to advance to the playoffs, as DR was to be one of the strongest competitors in SCC division.

Golf: The golf team clinched their playoff berth this week, winning two of their final three regular season matchups. Although they lost early in the week to Seekonk, 133-122, they rebounded with a win over Bourne with a score of 145-121. Nic Suprenant led the boys with a 3-over-par 38, while Jackson Mitchell shot a 40. The boys ended their week with a big win over Fairhaven, winning 138-100. Jacob Durocher and Zach Peterson each shot 41s to lead ORR to victory in their final regular season matchup. The boys will compete at the SCC Tournament and then, later in the season, at the state preliminaries in Dennis.

Boys' Soccer: The boys are another team that does not need to worry about their playoff chances, as they clinched their postseason spot in a decisive win over Wareham High School earlier this week. The boys won 6-3, with goals from Robby Magee, Jack Smith, Mason DaSilva, Alden Truesdale, Shane DeSousa, and Alex Sousa. The boys, who started the season at a dismal 0-2-1, found their stride and were able to go 8-0-2 since to lead themselves to the state tournament.

Girls' Soccer: The girls' soccer team had less of a dramatic week than the boys' team, as they had already clinched a playoff spot. The girls won both of their games this week, one against Wareham and one against Fairhaven. In the Wareham game, the sophomore Sarah Beaulieu led the way with two goals, while classmate Amy Bichajian had a goal and an assist. Senior transfer Abby Adams scored the only other goal of the game to clinch a 4-0 victory. The girls would later win against Fairhaven, 2-0.

Field Hockey: The field hockey team also does not need to worry about their postseason qualifying, as they qualified early on in the season. This week, however, determined the SCC Championship, as the girls faced off against Apponequet High School, whom they had previously lost to earlier this season. If the Lady Bulldogs were able to beat the Lady Lakers, they would get a share of the SCC crown. However, the girls lost in a hard-fought 2-0 game, meaning Apponequet clinched their second

It's that time of year again, and we're very excited. Starting this week, we will be publishing the entries for our Annual Scary Story contest, and they are really great. To get you ready for the season, be sure to check out Kyle DeCicco-Carey's story on page 48.

We'll also be holding a Halloween photo contest on Facebook, you can email your favorite Halloween photo to support@wanderer.com. Deadline for entry is November 2, so plan ahead for a chance to win. If you haven't already, you can check out our Facebook page at www.facebook.com/wanderer.

There's still time to enter our Halloween Cover Contest. Your best Halloween artwork could be on the cover of The Wanderer, and you could win an iPad mini! Submit your best Halloween drawing, photo, compilation, or anything else we can print on our cover to enter. Deadline for submitting artwork is Friday, October 18, at noon. Online voting will take place from October 20 to October 28. The winner will be on the cover of the October 31 edition of The Wanderer. For details on entering, visit www.wanderer.com and click on Halloween Contests.

So let the fun begin: Here's this week's selection from our Halloween Story Contest!

Halloween Story Contest #1

A Halloween Surprise

It was Halloween, the year of 2012, and little toddlers and elementary school kids paraded the sidewalk of Mystery Avenue in little princess, pirate, or witch costumes.

Some of the older children dared to walk up the chipped brick steps of number thirteen only to squeak with fright and hurry back to their calling parents. This was because number thirteen was rumored to be unlucky, haunted. No one had lived in it in years. Now the house had boarded windows, an overgrown yard, and a For Sale sign that had been there for the last fifteen years. Many neighbors had seen perspective buyers come and go, screaming that they had heard voices in the house, or seen ghosts, that was why everyone who lived on mystery Avenue was surprised when the sign in front of the house read Sold.

The Easton's family rumbled into the driveway of their new home. The moving truck screeched to a stop right behind them. The crisp autumn air whipped their hair as Mr. and Mrs. Easton stepped out of the car and grabbed boxes of picture frames and kitchen supplies. They were both excited to have a home in the "big city" as they called it. But Charlie had other thoughts about their new home. No one had ever asked him what he thought about moving, nobody asked him what he wanted to do. But, like his parents had told him whenever he complained, he had to make the best of it, so Charlie put a forced smile on his face and hurried to the door of number thirteen Mystery Avenue, his new home.

Charlie sat down on the front steps. What day was it again? Charlie wondered vaguely. Then he remembered the date, October 31, 2013. He had almost forgotten it was Halloween, not that it mattered to him, Charlie had stopped trick-or-treating years ago. Charlie sat on the doorstep some more and watched some kids walk by hand in hand with other trick-or-treaters or with their parents. The odd thing was, that everyone who walked by their house seemed to avoid it, or look up at it in fear. Charlie even saw two women mutter darkly to each other when they passed. Ignoring this, he went inside to help get the house set up.

Charlie poked around a little and found his parents' bedroom, but no other. Puzzled, Charlie looked down the stairs into the basement, and saw two movers setting his bed in a corner of it. He was sleeping in the basement? He had not agreed to sleep with old rugs leaning against the wall, moldy ice-skates with rats living in them, and a washing machine that clanked and groaned like a ghoul. But as his parents had said, he would have to make the best of it because he couldn't do anything about it now.

That night, after a dinner of cold soup, Charlie went to his bedroom, well basement. He was so tired from helping his dad lift furniture, and hanging up pictures, he had decided to go to bed early. That was when he noticed the door. It was about two feet high, and stood near the bottom of the stairs; a ray of moonlight fell across the old wooden surface. Intrigued, Charlie turned the handle, locked. Making a mental note to ask his parents about it in the morning, he fell into a restless sleep, dreaming twisted dreams of locked doors and of the two old women muttering to each other about his new house, thirteen

Mystery Avenue.

What Charlie didn't know was that behind that door was another world, called Arcannon. There, the king had just been killed by Pravus, the Dark Lord. Now Pravus was in charge, wreaking havoc. He was terrorizing villagers by day, and ordering the Child Snatcher to steal children for him by night. All the mothers were worried that their children would be next. But the mothers didn't have to worry anymore, Pravus had a new goal. Ever since he had discovered a fascinating place called Earth, Pravus wanted to own it. Create more terror, become more powerful. He had spent years creating portals into this new and exciting world, seeking out sorcerers that could bewitch these portals to look like innocent locked doors, to hide what was really there. A door to the world of Arcannon.

Pravus was in the throne room. He was bored; drumming his fingers on the armrest of his chair. Just then, the door squeaked open and his messenger scurried to the throne, tripping over his feet all the while. What a fool, thought Pravus, he can't even put one foot in front of the other. The messenger gasped, catching his breath, and then bowed so low that his long nose nearly touched the carpet.

"What is it servant." Pravus asked his voice like a knife cutting through the air.

"Th-The Child Snatcher is here my lord." The messenger stuttered nervously. His hands were shaking and his face was pale.

"Ah, very good," said Pravus. His voice was much softer and there was unmistakable delight in it. Pravus had wanted to see the Child Snatcher for quite some time. He had an important job for him.

"Tell him he can see me now." Pravus ordered.

"Yes my lord." Replied the messenger. And he fell flat on his face, stood up, and scurried back out the door again.

A few seconds later the doors opened with a bang and the lights seemed to flicker as the bulk of the Child Snatcher lumbered into the throne room. In two strides he was in front of Pravus.

"You asked to see me." The Child Snatcher said in a voice like rumbling thunder.

His arms were as thick as logs, with muscles the size of bowling balls. He was bald except for a mustache that was a tangled mass of hair and pieces of food that had gotten stuck there. His eyes were strange. One was black, and the other bright blue. He wore a black cloak with a red sash, the uniform of a kidnapper. When people in the town saw him in this uniform, they fled to their houses. Looking anxiously into the street from behind closed shutters until the Child Snatcher was a block away. The Child Snatcher loved being feared. Like Pravus, he had the ability to scare people just by looking at them. Pravus leaned close to the Child Snatcher and said,

"I have a very important mission for you."

"Ah, yes." Replied the Child Snatcher smiling nastily.
"I was disappointed with my rewards from your last job, I feel as though I was underpaid." His voice was getting soft and dangerous, like a venomous snake about to bite. Pravus gulped.

"I'll pay you as many gold coins as you like, with five rubies." Pravus whispered.

"Six rubies!" the Child Snatcher demanded. Pravus nodded numbly.

"Good." The Child Snatcher said, now satisfied with his pay.

"I will meet you at the tavern tonight at midnight, and I shall give you your quest." Pravus told him.

The Child Snatcher nodded matter of factly and strode down the long carpet to the door. He opened it, and disappeared with a swish of his cloak. Pravus sighed with relief. The Child Snatcher scared even him sometimes.

Pravus made his way to the tavern. He walked swiftly through dark alleyways and dirty streets. A stray cat slinked around in the trash, and an owl hooted in the distance. Soon he could see the harbor. The usual lights from fishing boats were not there, Pravus wasn't surprised. Ever since he had risen to power, people didn't like to go out after dark, especially on the scariest day of the year, October 31st. Finally Pravus was at the tavern. Lights were shining brightly in the windows, and a crooked sign on the door said: Tavern, keep out strangers. Nonsupporters of Pravus are not welcome.

All the burglars and criminals of Arcannon went to the tavern. It was always very busy, Pravus slipped through the door without being noticed. The Child Snatcher sat at the bar sipping from a large, dirty glass. Pravus wove through the large crowd of noisy people to the bar where the Child Snatcher was sitting. "Follow me." Pravus said. And, making sure the bartender wasn't looking; Pravus led the Child Snatcher to a small broom closet that held extra supplies. A mouse scuttled away as Pravus opened the door.

"I have been working on this for years. I need you to keep this a secret, and never tell anyone." Pravus began. "Closer than you think, is a portal to Earth."

The Child Snatchers' eyes narrowed suspiciously. Many people had tried unsuccessfully to make portals into this strange new place, it was impossible. Was Pravus tricking him?

"My plans are too confidential to confide with you, but I need you to get me a human child."

"How am I supposed do that?" Asked the Child Snatcher.

Pravus pulled a ruffled looking quill from his pocket, and on a cabinet that looked quite ordinary, he scrawled the letter P on the aged wood. To the Child Snatcher's surprise the letter glowed brightly, and the cabinet swung off the wall to reveal a door, about two feet high. Pravus said

"This is your answer."

Charlie jerked awake with a start. He didn't know what had woken him. He scanned around the room, his eyes wandered past the little door. His heart was pounding. He was sure he had seen the doorknob turn.

The kids who chased him usually stopped at the Fire Station, but today they kept running, yelling after him as he tried to get away. Even worse, they were all wearing masks because today was Halloween, his least favorite day of the year.

He would've loved to stay home tonight, but if he did, his dad would want to know why his eleven-year old son was too afraid to go out on Halloween. Leo hadn't even told him about those kids from school yet. It was too embarrassing.

All of a sudden, he noticed something out of the corner of his eye: a brown paper bag, sitting in front of his apartment door. Weird. Why was it there? Maybe one of those kids had gotten there ahead of him and left it. His stomach began to churn at the thought of what might be inside the bag.

Then he saw that neighbor lady, Mrs. Noga, watching him from her doorway down the hall. Their eyes met and she shut her door. Old people were nervous like that, he thought, but who was he to talk? He was chased home from school every day! His attention shifted back to the bag. If he called his dad about it, what would he say? "Hey, Dad, there's a paper bag in front of our apartment door, but I'm too afraid to look inside"? And if he just left it there, some trick-or-treater might open it and find ... something awful.

Leo knew what he had to do. He approached the door, unlocked it, and nudged the bag inside as he stepped in. It certainly didn't smell like something awful. It smelled delicious. Curiosity and hunger got the best of him. He bent down and cautiously opened the bag...

3:40 p.m.

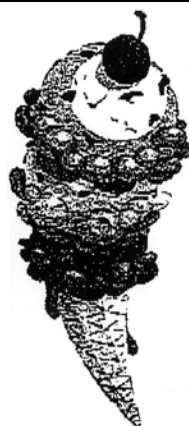

Anna waited, peering through a sliver of opening in her doorway—sitting, because her knees ached when she stood for too long. She listened for the sound of the boy—Leon? Leo?—the one who usually came thumping up the apartment stairs about this time every afternoon. The boy and his father were nice people – they had helped her once or twice, moving some boxes and changing the battery in her smoke detector. She wished the boy would hurry up and come home because not everyone in this world was nice. Sooner or later, some hoodlum would come along and swipe that bag she'd left him outside his door. Either that or one of those trick-or-treaters ...

Anna hated Halloween. All she wanted was to be left alone, but it was impossible when gangs of kids came banging on your door all night, begging for candy. October 31st was hard enough as it was. Her beloved Josef had died a year ago on this very day.

Don't be afraid. Those had been Josef's last words to his wife before he died, but how could she not be afraid? She was alone now. Completely alone. Since then, she had become a shut-in, a reclusive old lady who rarely left her apartment. She had lost a husband, but fear had replaced him as her companion.

And then yesterday, a strange thing had happened. Out of nowhere, Anna had decided to make a batch of brownies. It was an odd thing to do considering the fact she didn't even like brownies, but Josef had. They had been his favorite. When they were done baking, Anna realized how foolish she had been. She had no one to give them to. That's when she thought of the little boy down the hall ...

Thump, thump, thump! Thump! Good. He was finally home. Anna would watch for a little while longer and then close the door before he noticed her. She didn't want him to know who left the bag: charity was best when it was anonymous. Then the boy turned his head and looked down at the bag resting at his doorstep. His expression changed and Anna thought he looked uneasy, afraid. Before she could understand his reaction, he was looking at her. She shut the door immediately.

Brownies. No note attached, but they were just brownies. The smell of them enveloped Leo. He badly wanted to pour himself a glass of milk and devour one—maybe two—of those wonderful-smelling brownies, but what if they were poisoned? ...

Leo heard something. "Dad?!" he called out. He was sure he'd heard it, but his dad wasn't due home for another hour. With more than a little panic in his step, he took a quick walk-through of the apartment, just in case. Kitchen, living room, bathroom, both bedrooms: all clear. He went back to the bag of brownies.

Then he heard it again—a voice, but not his father's. Had one of those kids from school gotten into the apartment somehow? This was too much for Leo, especially on Halloween. A cold trickle of sweat ran down his spine and he shivered. "Don't be afraid," said the voice. Leo couldn't breathe.

5:02 p.m.

Matt was terrified.

Four times he'd called the apartment with no answer.

Perhaps Leo had gone to the Halloween Parade, but that was unlikely—his son didn't seem to enjoy being around other kids these days—so Matt found himself racing down Route 6, trying not to run over trick-or-treaters and cursing himself for not getting Leo a cell phone.

Two blocks from home and stuck at a red light! What if Leo was hurt? Matt didn't like his eleven-year old coming home to an empty apartment every day, but this was how it had to be for now. At least until he got that promotion. If he got it ... God, he missed his wife.

At long last, he pulled into the parking lot and scrambled up the staircase as though his life depended on it. Or Leo's. Panting, he fumbled with his keys, calling out his son's name until he finally burst through the door. "LEO!" he hollered, but the only sound that met him was the echo of his own voice.

And then, abruptly, it was over. Leo's voice, unmistakable, out in the hallway. Suddenly, Matt could breathe again. He raced to the door and opened it, finding Leo. The boy seemed to be having a conversation with someone, but when Matt checked the hallway, no one else was there.

MATTAPOISETT GOVERNMENT Comcast Channel 95 Verizon Channel 38

"Where were you?" Matt demanded. "I've been calling for an hour!" He hated getting angry with the boy, who had already been through so much in the past year.

"I was at Mrs. Noga's," the boy answered simply. Matt frowned. "Who?"

"Mrs. Noga. Down the hall. I got scared so I went to her place. She's teaching me how to play poker."

More confused now than angry, Matt just stood for a moment, examining his son. "Why were you scared? And who were just talking to?"

Leo hesitated. There was so much to tell his father: about those kids from school, and the voice in the apartment which, at first, he had believed to be his father's. After talking with Mrs. Noga, he had decided to tell his dad about all of it—even the hard parts—but later, not then. "Dad," he finally said. "Do you believe in ghosts?"

Matt was stunned. This has something to do with Halloween. "Ghosts?" he repeated, but in a gentler tone.

"Good ghosts," said Leo. "The kind that look after you and help you when you're afraid."

Matt's throat tightened and his eyes began to burn. He's talking about his mother. "Good ghosts ... yeah, absolutely. Do you believe in them?"

"Absolutely," answered the boy. "Dad, did you know that Mrs. Noga's husband died last year?" Matt shook his head. "She made me brownies today." He smiled, pointing to the paper bag on the counter. "They were Josef's idea. You want one?"

Matt didn't know who Josef was, but he was grateful that his son seemed to have made a new friend.

The "Jack"-o-lantern

Once upon a pumpkin, on the island of Roundsville, the villagers were gathered, for the pumpkin festival was about to begin. There were pumpkin hats, pumpkin deserts, pumpkin soup and the traditional pumpkin stories play. The villager's favorite story was the first event. It was called "The Farmer's Misfortune" and it went like this:

One day, one awful day, a farmer grew the most awful pumpkin ever seen. He had been cursed by a witch,

EDITOR'S PICK OF THE WEEK

Priscilla Richmond, Annie Paine, and the Shelter

Priscilla Richmond was widowed and living alone. Her home, which was located on present-day Foster Street, was described as being on "the fringe of the woods" in 1905. Priscilla called her house "The Shelter." Her husband, William, a Civil War veteran, had died in 1898. Her only child, Annie Paine, had married in 1888 and lived in Mattapoisett.

Priscilla finally had Annie back home after she had unexpectedly left to go to Paris. It was around Memorial Day when she left but it wasn't clear why. It wasn't until late July Annie's family found out she was attending a wedding.

Annie's niece and close friend, Anna Barstow, asked her to be the matron of honor in the ceremony. Anna had lived in Mattapoisett for about 20 years. Her father had been in the whaling business and retired to take over a sizable estate in Mattapoisett. After finishing school, Anna went to work in a hotel on Nantasket beach and later went to Boston and then Philadelphia to become a housekeeper.

While in Philadelphia, she worked for a wealthy bachelor. When he passed away, he left her a large sum of money which she supposedly invested in a mine company which she more than tripled her money. She returned to Massachusetts and lived in "a fashionable quarter of the city" with her own housekeeper, Teresa McKenna. Anna held lavish parties at her home in Boston but still came down to Mattapoisett to visit her widowed mother who lived with the Shaw family on North Street.

It may have been one of these parties that she met Paul Butler. Butler was the son of former Governor and Civil War Major General Benjamin Butler, who famously declared escaped slaves as "contraband of war" and once hanged a man in New Orleans during the war for tearing down the U.S. flag.

Paul Butler was a wealthy businessman and a member of several prominent yacht clubs. Despite Anna's declaration that she would never marry, the couple had other plans. Around Memorial Day, Paul, Anna, Anna's friend Annie Paine and several other close friends left for France. Paul or Anna did not tell their families they were going to marry.

Anna's uncle and Annie husband, Abraham Paine reacted to the news of the marriage; "Surprised? Yes I am ... Last I heard from them they were in Paris... where Mrs. Paine was ill."

Kyle DeCicco-Carey

In Paris, the wedding party ran into problems. When they arrived, they discovered that as foreigners, it would be impossible for them to marry according to French law. So they quickly changed plans and headed for Switzerland where they were married on July 21.

However, Annie became very ill and stayed behind in Paris. Annie had suffered a series of heart attacks and never recovered. She died on July 22. At home, Annie's mother, Priscilla, was grief stricken. Annie was so far away and she wanted her back.

After the wedding, Anna Butler made arrangements to return Annie's body was home. She prepared and placed in a coffin dressed in the clothing she was to wear at the wedding; a white silk dress and slippers.

Annie's body arrived in New York on August 7, and 10 days later, she was delivered to the Shelter, where her grieving mother awaited her. Her mother did not want to let go of her dear Annie so she kept her body, still dressed in her wedding party clothing lying in the coffin, in a parlor just off of the bedroom.

At one time, it was common to have the deceased laid out in the home in the days before a funeral with funeral services taking place in the home. It is most likely that many homes in the tri town, if they are old enough, housed a deceased loved one until the body could be buried.

However, Priscilla did not want to bury her daughter anytime soon. She spoke of having Annie there for her long, final visit. The room was decorated with flowers and she kept chairs near the coffin so she could sit with Annie and visitors that came to pay their respects. And many people came over the weeks to visit.

Though it was late August, the French undertaker that had prepared Annie's body for her trip home had taken great care to preserve her. She was embalmed and her body placed in a metallic casket, which was hermetically sealed. In the area of the casket that covered the face of Annie was a sheet of glass so one could see her face. The metallic casket was then placed in a polished oak coffin which had a unique feature; a hinged door over the glass of the casket. Priscilla often kept this door open so she could gaze at the face of her dead daughter.

Going in to September people began to wonder when or even if Priscilla would bury her daughter. It was thought she was waiting for Anna Butler to return home from Europe so she could attend her burial. Anna was just as distraught over the loss. She wrote home to Priscilla, "What shall I do, Mother Priscilla with my beautiful sister gone?"

Local folklore tells that Priscilla kept the body and now instead of a green thumb, he possessed an unlucky thumb. The pumpkin rotted within a day and the bad luck resided in the stem. The farmer could let it rot and have the pumpkin stench cause everyone to move away, or cut the stem and let the bad luck escape. One day, the stem was snapped by a rake ripping it open. That instant a face grew onto the pumpkin, exactly like the farmer's face and his disappeared! It grew a hooded cloak for a body and a steed materialized. The farmer's face turned orange, his hair grew into a green stem and his body turned into brown roots. He sunk into the ground. It just happens that his wife ran outside and said "Jack!" for that was his name and then said "Oh!" and saw the pumpkin filled with light. The youngest child ran out and said "Lantern!" and now pumpkins with faces were henceforth known as "Jack-o-lanterns". As for the cursed pumpkin rider, he roams the countryside appearing on Halloween whenever a Jack-o-lantern is lit. You are transformed if he touches the pumpkin when you do. You are spared only when you hold a "Pumpkin Festival" in his name. So hold a festival before it's too late!!!

in the house for six months before being ordered by the Board of Health to bury her daughter. But in late August the Board of Health discussed the matter and since they had received no complaints and the body was well sealed they let the mother continue to grieve.

According to Annie's death record she wasn't buried six months later. In fact, the date of burial is noted as September 27, 1905; about five and half weeks after her body returned home and two months after she died. Weather she was buried by a Board of Health order or unable to wait any longer for the return of Anna Butler, Priscilla finally had to let go and say goodbye forever at Cushing Cemetery.

The tragedy did not end here. Annie's husband, Abraham, had become withdrawn. He stayed in his "Oakland Heights" home in Mattapoisett and became known as a hermit. In July 1906, he traveled to New Bedford where he made a visit to James Ebenezer Norton Shaw, a young Mattapoisett attorney to draw up his will. He left Mr. Shaw's office and disappeared. He was last seen asking for car fare at a saloon located at the New Bedford end of the Fairhaven Bridge.

Early in 1907, a gruesome discovery was made. The skeleton of Abraham was found near a road in Mattapoisett. He had no clothing on except for two "flimsy" shirts which were identified by friends as belonging to Abraham. It was believed that he had wandered through the woods half clothed, perhaps intoxicated. At some point he became exhausted, passed out and later died.

In the early 2000s the home of Priscilla Richmond, once known as the Shelter, was falling apart. The home was torn down along with all of the grief it witnessed and a new house was built in its place.

A photograph of Annie Paine's coffin in her mother's house can be viewed at the Whaling Museum's website at: www.whalingmuseum.org/explore/collections/database/search-photographs and keyword search Priscilla Richmond.

She was boarding the Wanderer. It was a stormy day, all the clouds were full of storm. That night Cassy woke up chained to the mast. Screaming and shrieking, the captain came. Cassy took a quick sigh of relief, then when she saw the captain she gasped. Soon as she had looked she wished she hadn't. The captain's own face was seen through! Then he shook the mast till Cassy fell. He picked up Cassy and whispered to her "Never say a word of this." Cassy nodded and ran off to her room.

That morning Cassy and the other five crew members were doing their daily swim. Just then the most feared creature of the ocean came lurking along [a shark]. Well Cassy was on the dock drying off. Right when she turned around all she saw was about the amount of blood in two human bodies! And then she realized three of the crew members had been eaten. That left them with Cassy and the rest of the crew members.

That night, there was a terrible storm. Cassy woke up and wanted to go on the deck. The waves were so high, Cassy started jumping up and down because she was so happy to see the waves. Two seconds later, she was drowning in the water.

The next day the ghost of Cassy had found her way onto the Wanderer. She got into the captain's lounge and drove around, full speed and went in circles. Two crew members fell off the boat, Cassy on the other hand just wanted revenge so she just snickered. That second Cassy took the boat to the middle of the ocean and then went Ida cherished every moment of time spent with her loving family and enjoyed being a homemaker.

She was a member of the St. Anthony Women's Guild and a recipient of the Marian Medal. She also was a Red Hat Society member and enjoyed bowling, playing cards and games.

She is survived by her children, Elaine Brightman (Ken) of Florida, Denise Conton (Rich) of Mattapoisett, James Poitras (Carolyn) of CT, Lillian Tiernan (Doug) of Rochester, Lynne Foley (Pat) of Rochester, Kathy Fuller (Bill) of Acushnet, Brenda Adams (Jeff) of Berkley, David Poitras (Gretchen) of Marion, Roland Poitras, Jr. (Stacy) of W. Wareham; her sister, Ann Brescia (George) of Orleans; twenty-two grandchildren; twenty-one great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews. She was the sister of the late Raymond Laporte.

Friends and relatives are invited to attend a Mass of Christian Burial on Thursday, October 17, 2013 at 10am at St. Anthony's Church, 22 Barstow St. in Mattapoisett. Burial will follow in Sacred Heart Cemetery in New Bedford. The family received relatives and friends on Wednesday at the Rock Funeral Home, 1285 Ashley Blvd., New Bedford. Donations in Ida's memory may be made to Dana Farber Cancer Institute, Division of Development & The Jimmy Fund, 10 Brookline Place West, Floor 6, Brookline, MA 02445.

Jean Edna (Charlie) Bullard of South Chatham, MA passed away on October 13, 2013 with her family at her side.

She was born September 23, 1924 to Elisabeth Hole Coker and Harold Coker in New York City and grew up in Rutherford New Jersey and Moved to Mattapoisett, Mass in 1949.

She was preceded by John F. DeMello, Jr. and Walter L. Bullard. Survived by her 3 children and families: John F. DeMello, III of Mattapoisett, Richard H.F. DeMello of Mattapoisett and Jean E. Ellis of South Chatham, MA. Including their spouses and 10 grandchildren, 8 great grandchildren and 4 great-great grandchildren.

An accomplished Freelance Artist with works sold in Europe and around the US as well as gifts to the family. She volunteered at Toby Hospital in Wareham, was a member of the Mattapoisett Women's Club, Literature Group, Council on Agency and a supporter of the Buzzard Bay Coalition. One of her greatest attributes was her terrific sense of humor, her family and friends can attest to that.

Her life's pleasures - painting, playing bridge, drawing, reading, dancing with her beloved Walter and spending time with family and friends. (She also enjoyed constantly rearranging the furniture in the house.)

A special thank you to all the caregivers: Hope Hospice, Comfort Keepers, Liberty Commons, Jan and Wendy.

There will be no Funeral/Memorial Service. It is her request that we get together enjoy some food and drinks and dance to Sinatra's-It's The Last Dance; Le Berge - Lady In Red and Madonna's Say Good Bye.

Notes of comfort and sympathy may be made to her family at www.MorrisOConnorBlute.com

Thelma (Briggs) Ladner, 84, died on Saturday, September 28, 2013. She was the widow of the late Henderson Ladner and the daughter of the late Harold C. and Grace (Smith) Briggs.

She was born in Marion, graduated from Sippican School and Wareham High School. Thelma was employed by the Town of Marion until her retirement in 1983. Prior to her retirement she was very active in town affairs; especially, the Marion 4th of July celebrations.

Survivors include her sons, Robert and Kevin Ladner of Grace, Idaho, grandsons Daniel and Jason of Grace, Idaho; her siblings Lloyd, Arnold, Harold, Benjamin Briggs and Priscilla Briggs Norton. She was predeceased by her beloved son, Gary, siblings Samuel Kinney, Bernice Prestash, Margaret Waterhouse, Pauline Dott, Rose Jackson and Charles Briggs.

Services were held in Idaho on October 3, 2013. A memorial service for Thelma will be held in Marion at a later date.

to the deck, got a harpoon and flew to the captain and shot it through his head. That meant Cassy had murdered three innocent human beings. Cassy ran all the way to the harpoon shelf and grabbed the last one. She jumped underwater and shot a hole in the Wanderer.

Yes, the Wanderer did sink. Cassy was never seen again. Or was she?

MOVIE REVIEW

Sharp Wit

By Rob Gonsalves
www.robsmovievault.com

For an actor who trades endlessly on one basic mode — dour hard-ass — Danny Trejo gets a lot of fanboy love. I think Trejo's fans respond to his presence, his authenticity (he spent most of the '60s in and out of prison), and perhaps his craggy, unapologetic Mexican-ness. Danny Trejo is as far from stale whitebread as you can get. He's the real deal. In Machete Kills, Robert Rodriguez's sequel to his 2010 Machete, Trejo seems to hold almost everyone he meets in cool contempt. Why do these people want to start trouble with him? He's only going to kill them; it doesn't make sense. Trejo's Machete, like Snake Plissken, just wants to be left alone. Unlike Snake, Machete can be pulled into heroism by appeals to his sense of justice. Trejo, who does work some subtle shifts in tone into his dead-cool demeanor, stoically pushes forward while the rest of the cast goes nuts.

Here, for instance, we have Sofia Vergara as a character named Madame Desdemona, who runs a brothel, seethes about how much she despises men as she whips a client, and wears outfits studded with quick-draw weaponry. Vergara is often helplessly funny on Modern Family and elsewhere, and she's funny here, too, but also a little terrifying — she plays vengeful rage as an over-the-top joke, but she plays it huge, operatic in scale, emptying her guns and shrieking and flipping the Iberian slap. And she isn't even the craziest critter in this menagerie, not in a movie that also includes Demian Bichir as an agent with at least three personalities and Mel Gibson — yes, him — as an arms-running billionaire with plans to colonize space and a penchant for wearing a luchador mask to do dirty deeds.

Gibson, however deplorable he may be out in the world, is amusing and low-key insane here. He takes the spot held by Lindsay Lohan in the first Machete, proving that Rodriguez is good-hearted enough to hire just about anyone if they're willing to do the work. (Maybe the promised next installment, Machete Kills Again...in Space, will have a role for Miley Cyrus.) Lady Gaga also shows up as La Cameleon, a bounty hunter and master of disguise — she also turns up looking like Cuba Gooding Jr. and Walton Goggins, or perhaps Cuba Gooding Jr. and Walton Goggins turn up looking like her. Rodriguez never explains; he's off and running. The story is credited to Rodriguez and his brother Marcel (Kyle Ward worked it into a script), and it feels like something a couple of brothers would cobble together in their bunk bed when they're supposed to be asleep. Decapitated heads! A three-bladed machete! A molecule gun that turns people inside out! Dude, that rocks!

Rodriguez makes jam-packed B-movies, but what has always separated him from colder, more impersonal practitioners of neo-grindhouse is that he seems to be having so much fun, and he lets us share it; he throws loud parties and cheerfully invites us to drop in. There's a freewheeling honesty to the way he works, and an utter lack of pretense. His movies are what they are, and they are not for those with snobby or refined tastes. Too bad, because those people are missing some of the most vital, full-blooded pure filmmaking American cinema has to offer at the moment, especially at a time when even movies based on comic books slouch into our view like emo teenagers, all brooding and gloomy. Machete may never crack a smile but his stoicism is hard-earned; he grounds the craziness with which Rodriguez surrounds him.

The Machete movies gesture briefly towards political relevance: themes of immigration and drug cartels flow through both. Machete runs into corruption at all levels, to the point where the only person he trusts is Michelle Rodriguez as the leader of the Network, which helps Mexicans cross the border into America. Michelle's word is so good that she persuades Machete not to kill a hitman who once crucified his brother. The scene isn't terribly important to the plot, other than to explain why Tom Savini is returning from the first film, but it again demonstrates Robert Rodriguez's good-heartedness. Anyone, even an assassin who nailed a priest to a cross (or even Mel Gibson), can redeem himself. Like its predecessor, Machete Kills is very far from serious, but that doesn't make it meaningless.

Pick Buzzards Bay Film Festival Winner

Local film fans will get a chance this month to pick the $1,000 Grand Prize winner of the Buzzards Bay Film Festival's Shoot the Summer Cell Phone Cinema Contest. Voters can choose their favorite from among 14 finalists on the Festival's Facebook page between October 18 and November 4.

The Grand Prize winner will be announced at the Film Festival's second annual screening on November 16 at Gallery X, 169 William St., New Bedford. The Festival is sponsored by the Buzzards Bay Coalition to promote creativity and communication throughout the Bay watershed.

The contending finalists are the winners of the Cell Phone Contest's weekly competition, which ran from May to September. Local filmmakers submitted 32 videos to the contest over the course of the summer, and the 14 videos that have advanced to the final round were chosen by Facebook and email votes.

"There are an incredible range of videos battling it out for the title," said Buzzards Bay Film Festival Director Tom Gidwitz. "They include animation, documentaries, travelogues, and clips of Buzzards Bay's natural beauty. All of the filmmakers worked hard to make the final cut, and it will be fascinating to see who takes home the gold."

The Festival's November 16 screening will feature an

MAC Production of Chekhov's 'Seagull'

The Marion Art Center's production of Anton Chekhov's "Seagull" will open on Friday, November 1, and will run on Saturday, November 2, at 8:00 pm and Sunday, November 3, in a matinee performance at 4:00 pm, as well as Friday, November 8, and Saturday, November 9, at 8:00 pm. The comedy in four acts is directed by Rex McGraw and uses a modern translation by Curt Columbus, Artistic Director of Trinity-Rep Theater in Providence. Many of the same actors who were in Marion Art Center's 2009 production of "Uncle Vanya," another Chekhov play, have returned, and a few new actors have joined the cast to make this production of "Seagull" a rich, vibrant, and yes, sometimes even funny, slice-of-life drama set in the Russian countryside at the end of the 19th century. The cast of characters is layered with all classes from Russian life: literary intelligentsia, doctors, grand actresses, estate managers, cooks, and servants. Some desire love. Some desire success. Some desire artistic genius. Some just do their jobs every day without complaint. And, everyone seems to be in love with someone who is not in love with them.

"Seagull" dramatizes the romantic and artistic conflicts between four main characters: the famous story writer Boris Trigorin (played by David Horne), the ingénue Nina (played by Clare Healy Foley), the fading actress Irina Arkadina (played by Cynthia Latham), and her son, the aspiring symbolist playwright, Constantine Treplev (played by Jeffery Gately). It is set on a rural estate surrounded by a tranquil countryside and a beautiful, almost magical lake. The estate is owned by Peter Sorin, brother of Arkadina, (played by Paul Kandarian), a retired civil servant of the Russian Army. The estate is managed by a stubborn, ornery man named Shamrayev (played by Thom O'Shaughnessey), who is married to Paulina (played by Suzie Kokkins). Paulina hates her husband and is in love with Dr. Dorn (played by Jay Ryan) who does not love her in return. The estate manager has a daughter named Masha (played by Michele Letourneau) who is in love with Constantine, who is in love with Nina, who is in love with Trigorin.

SALOME'S STARS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A bid for you to step in and take over an incomplete project could prove to be an excellent learning experience that you can take with you when a new opportunity opens up.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time for socializing, both with family and with friends. Your aspects also favor developing new relationships, any or all of which might become especially meaningful.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your success in handling a recent difficult situation prompts a request to handle another workplace problem. But this is one you should accept only if you get all of the relevant facts.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) New information about a past decision raises some unsettling questions from an old friend. Be prepared to explain your actions fully and, if necessary, to make adjustments.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is not a good time to share personal secrets, even with someone you've known for a long while. What you don't reveal now won't come back to haunt you later.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Pushing yourself to meet a project deadline is admirable. But be careful not to leave out important details in your rush to complete your work and send it off.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Watch that you don't take on more than you can handle when offering to help someone with a personal problem. There might be hidden factors you weren't told about.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) That major move you've been considering could come sooner than you expected. Make sure you'll be ready with the facts you need when decision time arrives.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Languishing relationships can benefit from a break in routine. Get out of the rut and do something new and maybe more than a little unpredictable this weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although you don't think of yourself as a role model, your ability to make a tough decision at this time sets an example for others, who admire your courage.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You need to move any remaining obstacles out of your way before you can take on a new challenge. Seek advice from close, trusted friends and associates.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A career change appears increasingly likely to happen during the next several weeks. It's a good idea to start now to prepare, so you can be ready to make the move when the time comes.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a strong sense of obligation to justice, which inspires others to follow your example and do the right thing.

Cushing VFW 2425 Benefit

The Friends of Benjamin D. Cushing Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2425 and the town of Marion will be hosting a benefit to recognize the Veterans of Benjamin D. Cushing Post and the Ladies Auxiliary, to honor and thank them for their 80-plus years of service to the town. The event will be held on Saturday, November 2, at the Post. Italian-style dinner will be served to the honorees. Entertainment will be provided by nationally known Dan Clark, "The Singing Trooper."

Members of VFW Post 2425 have done extraordinary things for the town of Marion over the past 81 years. They have raised funds for numerous community projects, including the first ambulance purchased for the town in 1951. Members have been involved in the expansion and renovation of the Elizabeth Taber Library, organized countless parades for Memorial Day, Independence Day, and Veterans Day. The veterans serve in military funerals to honor their comrades and remember the sacrifices made for our country.

The Friends of Benjamin D. Cushing Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2425 and the town of Marion invite you to take this opportunity to give back to this wonderful organization. In addition to the dinner event, we are asking for donations to help the veterans make major repairs to the parking lot at the Post Pavilion.

Tax-deductible donations can be made payable to Benjamin D. Cushing VFW Post 2425, and mailed to TD

key saves including a great glove save. Juni Suarez and Derek Gauvin each scored five goals. In the end, it turned out to be a total team effort with the players showing true sportsmanship during a penalty-filled game. The Bobcats are back in action Saturday, October 19, at Falmouth ice arena

Squirt Grizzlies: On Saturday, the Gateway Grizzlies defeated YD 10-1 in a Yankee Conference game at Gallo rink. Thomas Galavotti led the offense with two goals and four assists. Ryker King and Chris Gauvin had two goals. Stephen Old, Matt Quinlan, Jack Satterley and Bailey Tieu all added a goal. Austin Fleming had three assists, and Tyler Kelly earned his first win of the season as the goalie. The Grizzlies take on the Stars next Saturday in Pembroke

Pee Wee Predators: The Gateway Predators skated to a 2-2 tie against the SWS Chiefs. It is the second tie against the Chiefs in as many meetings. Once again the Predators found themselves trailing going into the third period. Down a goal, right off the faceoff, Quirino doCanto skated through the defense, passed over to Tyler Lovendale, who quickly fed his brother Zack for a nice goal. With the score now tied, the Predators kept the pressure on and scored as doCanto hit the puck out of midair on a rebound of Lovendale's shot. The Predators then found themselves two men down and just couldn't overcome being short handed. They gave up a late goal to bring the score to a tie and remained that way at the final buzzer. Alex DeMarco had an outstanding game in net, coming up with some great saves throughout the game. The Predators will play a double header Sunday at Hetland.

Pee Wee Warriors: For the second time in as many games, the Gateway Warriors found themselves playing from behind. Plymouth jumped out to a two-goal lead in the first period, before Robert Ramsay netted a pass from Jameson Woodward. Ramsay also scored unassisted, tying the game late in the second period.

The Warriors broke the game open with three unanswered goals in the third frame, allowing the team to move to 7-0, atop the Yankee Conference with the 5-2 win Sunday. Warrior leading goal scorer Danny Flynn had two goals, while Jake Demoranville scored one on his own. Zachary Barris notched his team leading sixth assist. RJ Vickery, Noah Demoranville, and Jackson St. Don each were credited with playmakers as well. Steven Strachan notched his fourth Warrior victory in net.

Middle School: The Wareham Jr Vikings 1 team had a tough loss to the North Devils White team on Friday night, 3-1. The Vikings started out strong with a goal by Zack Lovendale near the end of the first period. Good defensive play and some outstanding saves by goalie Teaghin Andre kept the net safe for nearly half the game. However, the Devils managed to score midway through the second, when a save by Andre on a breakaway rebounded behind the net and was volleyed back by their

To my dog loving friends

Late yesterday afternoon Russ, Howard, Ziva and I went out for a walk. We told Emma it would be a long one so she decided to stay at the cabin to do homework. It was a nice temperature and Howard and I were chatting as Russ was leading the way. After about a half hour of walking we decided to walk to an old run-down dam that was another half hour or so away. Howard had never seen it and we had to pull him away from "exploring" to get back before it got dark. After about fifteen minutes into the walk back Ziva gave a single yelp and Russ hollered "Oh no!". At that point Howard and I ran, only to see Ziva standing on three legs with quills sticking out of the bottom of her paw and all over her muzzle. I picked her up and she was amazingly calm, but was trying to remove the quills with her tongue which already had quills in it. After a little bit of me carrying her Russ carried her. I couldn't stand seeing the quills in her paw so pulled them out and some of the ones in her shoulder. Russ said we should get back and find out what the proper thing to do it. We took turns carrying her. Howard was leading and saw Emma crying, wandering up and down the road looking for us because it was getting dark. I tried to calm her, then ran in the house to Google "removing quills".

Everything said to bring the dog to a vet to be sedated to remove them, not an option at 7pm on a Sunday night in rural Maine. The best advice I read was to blindfold the dog, grab the quill as low as you can and pull hard, and most importantly keep the dog calm. I pulled the easy ones and she was a sport. When it got to doing her nose, lips, and tongue she decided enough was enough. Russ and I switched positions, but that was short-lived because she tried to bite him. We switched back and she took a chance at my hand. I realized it wasn't personal so let her bite the pliers after each quill was extracted. Once her face was clear we let her free. Tail between her legs she crept into the kids' bedroom. After giving her a little time to calm down I went in the check her out. There was one quill still in her, but it was broken beneath the skin. When I touched it she would flinch and I knew we need to get it out. After reading up on quills I learned that if embedded they migrate and cause more damage and sometimes death, as well as infection risks increase. Russ is better at things that may cause more pain, but are necessary. I held her as he worked it out. It was very uncomfortable for her, but he managed to push it through the skin where there was no hole. After the ordeal she pretty much curled up and licked her wounds and slept. This morning I took her for her morning walk. She stayed right by my side and refused to walk the path we went on yesterday, settling for a short, but painless walk.

Gateway Youth 'Try Hockey for Free Day'

Gateway Youth Hockey invites all boys and girls, ages 4-9, to the Try Hockey For Free clinic to experience ice hockey first hand and learn the basics of the sport in a fun, safe environment.

Try Hockey for Free Day is part of a USA Hockey and National Hockey League "Come Play Hockey Month," part of a national platform to introduce kids to the sport.

"We've always been about getting more kids involved in the sport of hockey since we started Gateway Youth Hockey years ago; it's a great team sport that helps build character in kids at a very young age," said GYH President Ben Hathaway. "With this Try Hockey for Free Day, we're hoping to introduce this great sport to a whole new group of children ready to take the next step and learn what sets ice hockey apart from other sports. They are the future of this sport."

While GYH will have some equipment on hand for children to try, parents are encouraged to bring a helmet and skates if at all possible.

Parenting Class at Sippican School

The Sippican Elementary School in Marion is sponsoring a program designed to assist parents to become more knowledgeable in effective child rearing.

The four group sessions will focus on understanding the stages of development, the effective and ineffective methods of discipline, and a review of the different philosophies of parenting.

The presenter, Jim Fitzpatrick, LICSW, will share his 40 years of experiences working with parents and children in a child guidance clinic and as a School Social Worker at the elementary and secondary levels.

Meetings will be held at Sippican Elementary School on November 5, 12, 19, and 26 from 7:00 to 8:30 pm. Parents from other schools and towns are welcome. The fee is $25; all proceeds will benefit the Sippican VASE program. To register, please call 508-748-0100; enrollment is limited.

I Found the Aardvark!

Each week, hidden somewhere in the pages of The Wanderer is a tiny drawing of an aardvark. The little guy you are looking for looks exactly like the one pictured above (but don't put down this page as your answer, there's another one hidden somewhere in this issue).

Once you find the aardvark you can submit your answer online and if you are right you will get Aardvark Points! You can then use these points to get cool Aardvark Prizes!

To enter visit: www.wanderer.com and Click on I Found the Aardvark
 In the October 10, 2013 issue the Aardvark was on page 4!
